YOUNG woman has applied to me for advice on a sentiopent subject. She has two posts one of the men is intellectual, of inred, moral, upright, all that a populd be. The girl admires him agained indeed.

She enjoys his wise conversation as caim attitude toward life, and when we placed and safe journey acroths matrimonial sea, with no dang of encountering storing and shipwred. The other suiter is in every way, of ferior to the first. He is not clywe nor wall educated, nor well-in-did his the other man, nor is it any priviles.

If little stomach is sour, liver torpid or bowels clogged.

Clogged.

Mothers can rest easy, after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clorked-up waste, sour bile and fermanting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets gluggies and stomach disordered.

When cross, fererish, trestiens, see if tongue is conted, then give this deficious "fruit faxilive," Children love it, and it can not vause injury. No difference what als your little one-it fall of cold, or s sere throat, distributed as gentle "maile cleanering should always be the first treatment given. bins, and a man may know a woman for a poor, weak, silly creature, and year not be able to resist her fatal fascination.

Whether independ or inclination should rule in the selection of a life partner is a mooted question. In America we marry by inclination, and be frame they marry by inclination, and we hold the diverce record.

That, however, proves nothing except that we Americans are an impatient race and are mere progressive about trying to improve find conditions, even when they are matrimonial conditions, than are Europeans.

Certainly the woman who marries a man just because he appeals to her health, and will make a sood, safe husband will never be tryy happy. She may, if she is philosophical, be satisfied and contented to a degree as she contempiates her physical conforts gail examples in placid discussions on Browning and Breen with her intellectual spouse.

But alwars her heart will be a hunsering for the romance and the golden glory she has missed. She knows that friendship is not love, any more than beer is champaine, and there will be many and many a time when she will wonth a whole fat life of commopphase comfort.

But if she takes the thrill and lets the comfort go she stands the chance of forever cursing herself for her foily in ferciking the fleshpots for the aske of a Riss. Because, after all, thrills are the chills and beetic fever of romance, for which matrimonly is generally a never-falling cure. They sellom last, and woman who marry for their heads, and woman who marry for their heads, and who pick out the husband.

The very place, agreed his brother, So they hid behind the thick leaves of the tree, which had leafed out for early apring, and there the two bad creatures waited.

Just about this lime Uncle Wiggily himelf had started out from his hollow stump bungalow to walk in the woods and across the fields, as he did every day.

and across the fields, as he did every day.

"I wonder what sort of an adventure it shall have this time!" he said to himself. "I hope it is a real nice one."

Oh! If Uncle Wiggly had known what was in store for him, I think he would have stayed in his hellow stump bungalow. But hever mind, I'll make it all come out right in the end, you see if I don't. I don't know just how I'm going to do it, yet, but I'll find a way, never fear.

Uncle Wiggly hopped on and on, now and then swinging his red-white and blue-striped rheumatism crutch like a cane, herause he felt so young and spry and springilize. Pretty soon he came to the willow tree. He way sort of looking up at it, wondering if a nilbide of some of the green leaves would not do him good, when, all of a sudden, out, lumped the two bad alligutors and grabbed the burnuy gentle-man.

"Now we have you!" cried the

"Oh, please let me go! begged Uncle Wirgily, but they hooked their claws in his fur and smiled him back under the tree, which beind it branches no
low. I forgo to tell you it was a weeping willow tree and just now it was weeping. I think, because Uncle Wiggily was in such trouble.

"Let's see now," said the doublejointed tail alligajor. "Til carry this rabbit home, and then..."

"You'll do nothing of the sort." Interrupted the other, and not very politely either. "I'll carry him myself, Why, I caught him as much, as you did."

Well, maybe you did, but I saw him

him?"
And then these two allignors dis-puted and talked very unpleasantly, indeed to one another.
But all the while they kept tight hold of the burner uncle so be could not get away.

"Well," said the double-jointed tail alligator after a while, "we must settle this one way or the other. Am I to rearry him to our den, dr you?"

"Me! I'll do it, if you took him you'd keep all for yourself. I know you?"

you'd keep all for yourself. I know you?

"No, I wouldn't! But that's just what you'd do. I know you only too well. No, if I can't earry this rabbit home myself you shand!"

"I say the same thing. I'm going to have 'my rights."

Now, while the two had alligators were galking this way they did not nay riuch attention to Uncle Wiggily, They held him so tightly in their characteristics own paws, and when the two had creatures were talking right in each other's face and using big words Unite Wiggily reached up and cut off a pace of wollow wood with the bark on
